Religion and Spirituality:

A Spiritual Journey Leaves its Mark

By Nnedi Okorafor

"Voodoo is probably the most maligned and misunderstood religion in the world," writes Dr. Sharon Caulder, a former physical therapist from New York who traveled to West Africa to reinvent herself spiritually. In Mark of Voodoo: Awakening to My African Spiritual Heritage (Llewellyn Publications, $21.95) Caulder explains that the faith, victim of ugly stereotyping for centuries, is a traditional African religion that was spread to the West by African slaves. The journey she describes in her book both reverses and completes that cycle.

Caulder's personal search for her spiritual and ethnic heritage led her right into one of Voodoo's many beating hearts. Traveling to Benin, Caulder describes both dislocation and wonder, as her expedition transforms her from seeker to practitioner. After many months of study, Caulder was initiated by a supreme chief of Voodoo, Daagbo Hounon Houna.

Reconnecting to the Past to Affect the Future

Welcome to our third issue, much has occurred since we last communicated. Many thanks go out to readers who have responded so very positively to the information we have been putting out to you.

We have spent a lot of time focusing on exposing much of the deceit inherent in the world today. While we continue that trend with this issue with the conclusion of "The Real Story of Money Control Over America," we have the unique opportunity to shift our focus.

We recently became aware of a most remarkable entity in the person of Dr. Sharon Caulder, a psychologist and initiated Vodou Chief. We have given much space to introducing Dr. Caulder to you, and we also will be hosting a Sacred Spiritual Retreat in which she will be introducing participants to African Vodun, the origins of our spiritual lineage.

In these troubling times it is becoming more evident every day that the solutions we have sought in the past to our social, political and economic problems in the world have not worked.

So, it is incumbent upon us to find a new approach. We believe that by reconnecting to our spiritual roots, we may find the solutions we have been seeking.

In fact, if we look closely, much of our predicament may be traced to the fact that we were separated from our cultural heritage—spiritual and social—and that only through reconnecting and understanding who we are as a people, can we find solutions that will work in today's increasingly oppressive social order.

If we look to the Haitian revolution we find that Vodun was a key element in their ability to cast off the yoke of their oppressors. (see tapes 307 and 1344 in the video collection on Voodoo)

We can even look to the Native American's history for insight. To this day I am amazed that the government went so far as to outlaw their ritual Ghost Dance. Why? Because it was so effective.

We will have more to say about this subject in future issues.

Dr. Caulder will also be a continuing contributor to this publication. Her first article for us on Sex Magic is also included here.

In the next issue we will begin a new series on Natural Law or the Law of Nature, that will be the beginning of a process that will lay a foundation for understanding how man-made codes disguised as laws are used to extract power from us all, individually and collectively.

By understanding how things are supposed to work, we can better understand what needs to be done in order to affect true change in the world.

ST NEWS & VIEWS

Here are a few of the things learned at the Black Think Tank this week.

Facts:

1. The first Americans or Native Americans going back to 13,000 BC were Black! Look up the Folsom People who lived in Arizona.
2. Best reason to stop our use of the term African American and say Black. A white person who was born in Africa, who moves to America is an African American and qualifies for financial aid, etc., but will get the jobs/pay privileges afforded to whites.
3. Look up the Slavery Law of 1665 (which stayed in effect until 1968) and the Maryland Doctrine of Exclusion (1638): both laws state that Blacks must be excluded from the benefits afforded whites and that Blacks must remain noncompetitive with whites, except in sports and entertainment.
4. Two white men: Bill Gates and Larry Ellison, combined have more wealth than the combined wealth of all 36 million Blacks in America. Civil Rights did not change the economic landscape or the balance of power in America!
5. Asians received 80% of all government contracts set aside for minorities. Hello!!!!!!
6. Black people eat more fish than whites by a four to one margin. For every dollar whites spend on fish, Blacks spend nine dollars on fish. Fish sold wholesale for $1 will retail at $2.50 -- $3.00. Guess what business we should be in as a Black community?
7. There are no Black owned national cable or major network television stations. The Black woman who owns our only black owned radio stations, plans to sell to white owners after hearing the deal Bob Johnson received for selling BET. (Cathy Hughes is from OMAHA, ya'll!)

8. There are no Black owned companies on the Wall Street Stock Exchange where Blacks own the majority or controlling interest of the stock.

9. 96% of all Black inmates are men.

10. Over the next two years 440,000 Black inmates will be released from prison. The State has no place to put them as they reenter society. Halfway house business!

11. In 1860, 98% of all Blacks in America worked for White people. In 2001, 98% of all Blacks in America still work for white people. Why?!

12. In 1860, Blacks in America had a combined net worth of half of one percentage point. Guess what in 2001, after Civil Rights, Jesse Jackson, Oprah, Shaq, NAACP, and Urban League, our combined net worth is half a percentage point.

13. For every dollar earned by a Jewish person, that dollar touches 12-18 Jewish hands before it leaves their community. For every dollar earned by a Black person it leaves the community soon as he or she earns it!

14. Last week in Washington, DC Black teenagers were arrested and booked for eating McDonalds on the metro subway. Cops cited the recent 5-4 court decision as the permission to arrest lawbreakers even for minor offenses.

15. 67% of all hate crimes in America are against Blacks. After we get through being pleased that we have carpet in our office, a secretary, our name on the door and make six figures, we do not own anything.

What will happen if you miss six months of work without pay? All we have left our children is debt, not an inheritance! You cannot pass welfare or food stamps onto our kids as a nest egg! We are not even in the race! By the way, the word "race" hit the English language in the 16th century when Europeans held a contest to see who will win the race to gather the most wealth through exploitation of blacks.

You must read "Powernomics" by Claude Anderson. This is our blueprint to create wealth, not just have a job, but be a business owner, so you can hire people, be listed on the stock exchange, develop businesses to meet our needs. This is "Good Food" for thought.

CNN Refuses To Run Connie Chung's Skull & Bones Broadcast

by Todd Brendan Fahey

CNN spiked Connie Chung's widely-publicized "expose" on Yale University's Order of Skull & Bones, chapter 322, which counts among its membership President George W. Bush and his father and grandfather before him, and influential aide and former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Brent Scowcroft, and Connie Chung ain't talking. The program—billed at CNN's web site to air 8:00pm ET, September 4, did not materialize; in its place was a story of a murder trial in Florida. Contacted repeatedly at CNN studios, representatives of Ms. Chung and producers of Connie Chung Tonight were either "unavailable" or had "no comment."

The Order of Skull & Bones forms the nucleus of the private Council on Foreign Relations (CFR) and Trilateral Commission—which are, themselves—the guiding forces behind the drive toward an United Nations-run World Government. Each year at Yale, since 1832, 15 sophomores are "tapped" for consideration into this secret society, whose headquarters, called "the Tomb," lie underground, beneath Yale's campus. Contained within the Tomb are computer facilities which are said to rival NORAD in sophistication. And although initiates are sworn to secrecy, a complete membership roster, initiation rites and Bones history was furnished to the late Dr. Anthony Sutton in 1981.

Dr. Sutton, who died this year at the age of 84, was at the time a Research Fellow at the prestigious Hoover Institution of Stanford University. His ardent anti-communist/anti-globalist views and reputation for impeccable research doubtless attracted the attention of the disgruntled Bonesman, and with the records, Sutton eventually produced "America's Secret Establishment: An Introduction to the Order of Skull & Bones, the definitive expose on that which lies at the core of a conspiracy to enact Global Government, via the destruction of America's Constitutional republican political system.

Ms. Chung's TV program would probably have been a puff piece anyway, but the 11th-hour spiking of her Skull & Bones broadcast is a glaring example of the Pravda-like protection of the Establishment that is the so-called "mainstream media."

Born and raised in the United States, Caulder is now a full-fledged African Vodun chief. After studying neuroscience, counseling and mythology, she currently works as an energy healer in Northern California.

Voodoo (a spelling sometimes considered offensive and often abandoned in favor of vodun, or vodou) has suffered smears and evil rumors far too long; Caulder's book attempts to change that.

Q: You had a successful practice and two daughters. What made you decide to pick up and go to Africa?

A: I went because I had unresolved memories of rituals and ceremonies from childhood. Eventually I realized that they had something to do with either a religion or Satanism or something like that. By this time in my life I had a private practice, holistic physical therapy. Eventually I started doing research in the library. I learned that what I was remembering probably had to do with an African religion.

I talked to several travel agents. None of them wanted to talk about Voodoo. They said it was bad for business. I got one young woman and she said to me, "Where do you want to go?" I said, "I want to go to Benin." I hadn't even heard of Benin! I eventually traced my people to a village in Benin.

Q: The name just came to you out of thin air?

A: Yes. I heard a voice inside me say it. Later on, I read that Benin was the originating place of Voodoo. I got fitted for a backpack and flew into Cotonou [Benin's capital]. I had a switchblade at my breast and a hunting knife on my leg. I wasn't going to go down easy.

Q: The urge to leave your home to answer this calling was that powerful?

A: It was worth dying for. Both of my daughters were living away from home and had gone through school. I made a will and packed my things. I'd had

In 1997, the Dalai Lama convened 75 world spiritual leaders in Paris, France. Vodou Supreme Chief Daagbo Hounon Houna was summoned to represent the Vodou people. The Dalai advised the sovereignty that the world is in trouble and in need of their knowledge and wisdom. He asked that they share their sacred teachings with the world community. Daagbo, the ancestors, and the deities charged Dr. Caulder with that task. Her books were written in response to that assignment. Beginning with the Sacred Spiritual Retreat to be held in Atlanta, Georgia on November 2, 2002 (see page 7), she is now about to begin formal presentation of that knowledge to her own people, whose roots forge back to that same ancient knowledge and wisdom of the African religions of the Dahomey empire.

a full life. It may sound funny to someone young. I always live my life as if I'm laying in the coffin and I don't want to say I "coulda woulda shoulda."

Q: How did you meet the Supreme Chief, Daagbo Hounon Houna?

A: I met a driver named Kasim who spoke some English. He had heard that some people practiced Voodoo in a town called Ouidah. Once there, he asked some people where we could find the chief of Voodoo. At the time, I didn't know that there were many Voodoo chiefs. Someone put a little boy in the car and he led us to a compound. Daagbo was there with a woman who happened to be one of the few in the area who could translate into English. It was as if they were there waiting for me.

Q: Among the color photos in the book, there are several bloody ones depicting sacrificed animals. Readers with no prior knowledge of Voodoo might be a little bothered by this. How would you explain the role of sacrifice in Voodoo?

A: This is what people ask me about a lot on the radio, and it often gets me in trouble. But I'm going to say it anyway. Later in the book we go into a village that was deep in the bush and I knew that they still did human sacrifice there. When we went to visit, we had a full entourage of bodyguards. All the chiefs did it at one time. But eventually they no longer wanted to sacrifice their own people. They went to the ancestors and deities and were told they could sacrifice animals.

The purpose in sacrificing is to get empowerment. An animal is selected and it gives permission by chomping on the leaves offered to it. The animal that they sacrifice is the main food for the village. In the meantime, they pray, anoint and make the goat sacred. Once the animal is made sacred, they sacrifice it and then eat the animal's flesh. They also drink some of the blood, because they are not only looking for physical nourishment but spiritual nourishment as well. Universally, blood and flesh hold the power of a person or an animal. It was very holy, everyone would come. It was an insult not to eat of the animal who had given its life for you.

It's the same thing in a Catholic church. On Sunday, people drink the blood of Christ and the wafer, his body. They are getting empowerment from that. We are looking for help; that's what religion is from day to day. Voodoo is no different. I can't eat red meat or chicken in this country because of what they do to it in the slaughterhouses.

Q: A lot of people nowadays prefer the spellings "Vodou" and "Vodun" for the religion you call "Voodoo." Can you tell me why you use the spelling you do?

A: The word can be spelled in various ways. "Voodoo" is the most familiar to American readers and after much deliberation I decided to use that spelling, since my book is a story written to American people, not a scholarly book. It was also pointed out to me that if someone does a search for information about the religion they most often use "Voodoo" spelling.

The French designations do not appeal to me, because at some level they are still controlling French West Africa — politically, economically, morally, etc. Their presence in Benin is offensive on a daily basis. "Vodou," "Vodoun" and "Vaudou" are French designations and used faithfully for Haitian variety. What is the difference between using a French spelling and an American spelling? The French have been and continue to be more destructive to African traditional religions and people than Americans have.

However, for my scholarly book, which is being published this year I use the Fon spelling, "Vodu," since the focus of my work is the original African tradition of the Fon people. The book will be titled African Vodou: The Spirituality of A People. I think some of these spellings come from the mistaken belief that other African Traditional Religions are Vodou. Vodou is actually a very small religion with a very big reputation.

For more information on Dr. Caulder and the Foundation for the Preservation of the African Vodou Religion, please visit:
www.drsharoncaulder.com and www.voodooofoundation.org

Q: Can you talk a little about how and why Voodoo has been so distorted and denigrated in the West?

A: For the same reason why the American people outlawed the use of drums and the practice of African religions during slavery times, and then afterward took the majestic image of one of Vodou's most powerful religious deities-saints-superheroes, turned her into a dumb plantation mammy, and put it on a box of pancake mix. These are effective strategies to diminish a very powerful religion and people. Those enslaved people were Africa's elite when captured, and the fittest survived. Now, the strategy was to make it safe for America to live with these intelligent, powerful — physically and spiritually — people, whom they spent two and a half centuries torturing and annihilating.

That scarf around "mammy's" head is not a rag to cover her dirty head while she toiled in the kitchen. It is a sacred piece of cloth used to this day by Vodou spiritual hierarchy to cover their heads, their sacred heads! She is Mami Wata, by the way. This is the same "mammy" who healed her people and those of the slave master family with herbs.

In Haiti the healing herbs were used to poison the families during the slave rebellion. Knowledge is knowledge, it can be used for both positive and negative purposes. Some argue that using the herbs to destroy the enslavers is still positive. Vodou gained its negative reputation because the people were powerful in their spiritual work and they had a chance to demonstrate just how powerful when they, along with their divinity, used it to overthrow their captors and become the first independent black nation in the world.

Q: Clairvoyance, curses, spirit possession and energy healing are all common phenomenon you describe in Mark of Voodoo. Why do you think readers might meet these concepts with a skeptical eye?

The ole plantation mammy was actually a manifestation of the powerful Vodou deity Mami Chamba. She accompanied the enslaved Africans to the New World.

A: The more civilized we get, the more westernized we get, the more our focus becomes limited to the physical world. Westerners, especially intellectuals, think that the more focused you are on the physical world, the more advanced you are. But you end up cutting out other aspects of our environments. I have heard people say that everyone can see into the spirit world but because of our culture, we moved away from that early in life.

Q: In the book, you express some deep reservations about spirit possession, the Vodou tradition of allowing spirits to enter one's body and soul. Why?

A: I refused to allow it. First of all, the real high level forces are too busy to sit on someone's shoulder and whisper in someone's ear. That leaves lower forces to do the possessing. The first thing you notice after possession is how beat up you are afterwards. The deity is giving you some information, but they are also taking your spirit food. You see people falling out; you're absolutely depleted. You're not being good to yourself. I advocate stopping this practice. We need to find a different way to relate to the deities. I'm a chief and I'll always be a chief. I relate to them, but I don't let them come into me.

This picture was painted on a wall within Daagbo's compound by a Haitian devotee as a gift for Daagbo. In Vodou mythology, every 7 years the Vodou supreme chief goes into the sea, the home of his Mami Wata deities. He enters the sea with a live goat and returns hours later with the goat sacrificed and cooked.

Q: So you think some changes should be made within Voodoo?

A: Most religions used to use animal sacrifices. As people mature and learn more and get wiser, eventually, they turn to symbols. The Christians went from sacrificing animals to symbolic sacrifice. Daagbo is extraordinary; he knows this. He asked me to discuss moving forward. He's wise enough to know that they [Voodoo practitioners] are behind. He wants more for his people. When he met with the Dalai Lama, it changed him. That's when he started talking about changes.

Q: Your relationship with your translator, Martine De Souza, sheds light on the situation of women in Benin, both within the religion of Voodoo and in general. Do you think the role of women in the religion also needs to evolve?

A: I'm one of few women chiefs in the world. When I was there, I met two and heard of three others. Daagbo was very unusual because he had a woman assistant, and I saw him get ostracized for that by other chiefs. I've been there when they asked him to move her out of the council room. Women have a very difficult time. This is another thing that needs to be changed.

I wrote a scholarly version of the book and I devoted a chapter to this issue. As far as the role of women there, their life is awful. Even the men who don't practice polygamy have multiple girlfriends. Writing about Martine, I was trying to give you a feel for what it's like to be a woman there. The mother of Daagbo's young kids wanted me to be a part of their family because she needed help. So, very often, because life is so difficult, the women appreciate having the help of other women. But it's also very much a sexual thing for the men. It's not hidden. It's a hurtful situation. I've seen nothing but pain.

Q: What is the message you want the reader to come away with after reading Mark of Voodoo?

A: I think it's important for black people to understand where we came from; that we do come from a very intelligent and magical people. That's our legacy; that's our birthright. To deny this doesn't work for us. We're not white or Asian; we're African. Vodun people were known for their energy mastery. It was only when we were enslaved and we had no other weapons to use against our captors that we used our energy mastery abilities in negative ways. Power is power. It's how you use it that counts.

Many blacks think that turning to Christianity erases their lineage and their genes. They deny who they are and where they come from. Why not take a look at who we are, honor ourselves and then decide how and who we want to worship?

Nnedi Okorafor is a Chicago-based freelance journalist and fiction writer, and the editor of Afrique Newsmagazine.

Reclaiming One Of Our Sacred Ancestral Religions:

African Vodun

with
Chief Sharon Caulder, Ph.D.

Vodun is probably the most vilified religion in the world. It is commonly associated with evil and malevolence. In fact, the word Voodoo is often a euphemism for random systems of magic and evil from a variety of perspectives. The word can be spelled in various ways. Voodoo is the most familiar to Americans. Vodou, Vodoun, and Vaudou are French designations for the Haitian variety, and Vodun is sometimes used for African sects. However, I have chosen to use the Fon spelling, Vodun, since that is the tribe of my people.

The system that I am initiated into is but one of many sects of Dahomean Vodun. The Supreme Chief Daagbo Hounon Houna is recognized as the "Pope" of Vodun by the Catholic Pope, the Dalai Lama, and numerous other world leaders and dignitaries. African Vodun is the root of all Vodun, Haitian, New Orleans, and other systems throughout the Americas and the Caribbean. The Hounon family has provided the supreme chiefs for this tradition headquartered in Ouidah, Republic of Benin, dating back to at least 1432 (by written record).

References to Vodun outside of its religious connotation are used by politicians, by entertainers, in advertising and by ordinary people to describe deceptive or magical perspectives, techniques, and systems. Vodun has been associated with such mysterious and evil acts as sticking pins into dolls to harm an enemy and condemning people to the fate of being spiritually reduced to a zombie. Yet Vodun is a religion. That makes Vodun probably one of the world's least understood religions. Different from most religions, Vodun's positive aspects have historically been denied or ignored.

The terror and erotic fascination that the unfamiliar darkness incites in Westerners is probably one reason that Vodun has been shackled with such a barbaric reputation. Another is its association with that heinous system of torture and sale of humans, the African slave trade. The site of the origin of the Vodun religion and the largest slave port in West Africa are one and the same—Ouidah in the Republic of Benin.

In his book, The Crisis of Possession in Voodoo, physician and scholar Louis Mars says that Voodoo awaits a historian of Voodoo mysticism who would simultaneously be a fervent practitioner. This, he postulates, is how Vodun would be adequately explained, as it cannot be hypothesized by the uninitiated like himself. Mars realized that he cannot relive the state of another soul; he can only deduce the experiences through a method of comparison and analogy. Mar's wish can finally be granted, as I am both a historian and a fervent practitioner.

African scholar Paul Mercier recognized that every writer who discusses Dahomean cosmology and religion [Vodun] is confronted by serious difficulties, the importance of which is widely recognized. The elaborate complex of religion and mythology, of notions concerning man and the world, has certainly challenged the attention, but a true and adequate account of the structure and function of Dahomean Vodun has yet to be inscribed. Most of the studies have been concerned with descriptions rather than interpretations, and even those are inadequate. Mercier concludes that undoubtedly, the inadequacy of their (the scholars) knowledge is to blame.

In addition, the Vodun practitioners intentionally keep secret the details of the religion in order to preserve the limited power that they have managed to retain from their enemies in this changing world. And for the most part it is the white peoples who constitute the scholars and power seekers scouring Benin for the sacred Vodun knowledge and wisdom, as they continue to cruelly manipulate the harsh political, economic, and social climate and conditions of the region.

Back in 1997 when the Dalai Lama convened 75 world spiritual leaders in Paris, France, Vodun Supreme Chief Daagbo Hounon Houna was summoned to represent the Vodun people. The Dalai advised the sovereignty that the world is in trouble and in need of their knowledge and wisdom. He asked that they share their sacred teachings with the world community. with that task. My books were written in response to that assignment. Now I am honored to begin formal presentation of that knowledge with my own people, people whose roots forge back to that same ancient knowledge and wisdom of the African religions of the Dahomey empire.

Any one who has read my book, Mark of Voodoo, will remember when I was summoned to the bedside of my dying grandmother after many years of estrangement. It took me a few years to understand the purpose of that visit. I had been summoned by tradition for an important ritual that took place that Sunday afternoon, outside of my conscious awareness, in the “invisible” world. My grandmother energetically passed on to me the Vodun spirit that was my inheritance. It was what I had been groomed for as a child. It was this legacy that eventually sent me home to my people in West Africa. Then at the conclusion of my story Daagbo summoned me to his bedside when he was expected to die. Feeling that I had my own personal consciousness work to do, I chose to remain stateside and assist him from a distance.

I have been summoned once again to Daagbo’s side. This time I am ready to go! Daagbo has knowledge and instructions for me, which I will be prepared to present to you during our first gathering, November 2-3, 2002 in Atlanta, Georgia.

Upcoming Vodun Workshop Sessions

Following the intense grounding in the Vodun tradition at the retreat on November 2, 2002, the program will branch into two courses of study in early 2003:

African Vodun: A Tool for Self-Healing

and

Vodun Practitioners: Healers & Magicians

The next course of study (African Vodun) is for folks who are interested in living a spiritual life incorporated with African-centered spiritual principles and practices. (Feb. 2003)

The first course of study (Vodun Practitioners) is for those folks who already practice Vodun or another esoteric system and want to improve their ability. It is also for people interested in being initiated into the Vodun religion, or to start their own temple. (May 2003)

We also plan a weekend on Sex Magic with a sacred day for couples. This workshop will embrace and be appropriate for our teenagers. Knowledge is power; sacred knowledge is a gift from the divine.

SEX MAGIC

Magical Woman

Like the earth, woman possesses the ability to be inert and passive as she receives sperm and germinates life. Like water woman flows following the form of any container that needs filling. You see woman does not have a single form. She defies this obstacle, is changeable, but like any vital living thing, her soul withers and dies if grasped or mastered. Woman is the void which can only be appropriated by being filled. Sex plays an important role in keeping a woman filled as witnessed in this excerpt from Mark of Voodoo: Awakening To My African Spiritual Heritage:

“The moist darkness ebbed in, consuming the compound as we shifted into our night mode. With the night came mystery. Feeling sensuous, I bathed and slipped into a silky white nightshirt that I had brought from home. I rolled my orange foam mat out in the middle of the floor in preparation for going to sleep. The heat of the day was stoked deep in my groin. Like the grottos upon the surface of the earth that permit access to its depths, my genitals felt ready to receive my man. My breasts, humming with life, stood ready to nourish him.

Daagbo suddenly appeared at the entrance to my abode. I immediately recognized his knock and opened my flimsy door. He stood there freshly bathed, as was his habit in the evening, and he was swathed in the white toga that he wore at night. The knowledge that he was naked beneath it caused juices to surge in all my openings. I was the earth, his earth, the matter that encloses life and supports all that is necessary for his existence.

Daagbo smiled broadly and walked inside. He glanced over at his usual chair for a brief moment then moved toward my mat and eased himself down onto it, positioning himself on his left side. His mammoth body took up most of the mat. I quickly lay down next to him on my right side, facing him. We caressed each other with our eyes and with our hands. At that moment my resources were as vast as Africa herself. My waters flowed like her rivers, and my love drank from me. My energy reservoir overflowed, filling his every cell, revitalizing him. Like water, my essence took on no single form but flowed in and out of him, refusing to be mastered. I became like a shadow, and when he tried to grasp me I became the void, demanding to be filled. Finally, filled with each other, I curled up within the protective black velvet cave formed by his body, and we both drifted off to sleep.”

From an energetic perspective the woman's spirit structure is less stable, more penetrable than that of the male. After all she conceives, houses, and grows babies within her being. Receptivity, flexibility, and nurturing are appropriate and valuable assets for this enormous task and responsibility. But woman's generous nature also leaves her vulnerable to the carnate and discarnate beings around her. She is often too easily or violently penetrated; sometimes even by those she loves.

Sexual interactions are dynamic situations that can consume a woman's essence or fill her. An aggressive embodied partner can ruthlessly penetrate her and consume her essence, sucking her life force right out of her, while aggressive disembodied spirits can continue the rape after the sexual act with her embodied partner is completed. An empty woman is all too common in our world. But a woman who has been filled during the sexual act and by any number of aspects and relationships in her life, is all too rare, but most majestic. Woman is magical in her natural consummate state!

Gratefully, when a woman has been ravished, her malleable and pliable characteristics usually enable her to re-cooperate from depleting ordeals. She reorganizes herself by extracting from her stored life force energy, accessing her wisdom, and utilizing her creativity. Under ordinary circumstances, she moves right back into her roles and tasks in life, no matter how demanding. Since the fuller she is the more abundant and powerful her life force becomes, establishing a relationship that keeps her filled is essential to her evolution. And the opposite is also true. The longer woman lives empty the less chance she has of retaining enough of her depleting life force to last a full lifetime, much less accumulate enough life force energy with which to flourish, grow, and evolve.

There are many ways to deplete a woman just as there are any number of ways to keep her full and abundant. Sexual encounters are extremely important and gaining an understanding of how they impact a woman will provide enough information so that any one interested can create endless situations directed at filling or energizing their partner... or depleting her.

Both men and women possess a vital energy source that is essentially life force energy. This energy is accessed by our physical bodies, processed from the food that we eat and by our chakras from the universal energy available to us. Life force energy feeds our spirits and supports harmony between our physical and spirit bodies. The energy is needed to fuel us so that we perform our activities of daily living and eventually raise our levels of consciousness.

This supply of vital energy can be depleted or enhanced according to an individual's conduct. Participating in extreme spiritual practices prematurely, precipitate sexual activity, and substance abuse are among a number of ways to deplete that energy. Engaging in activities that allow an energy vampire, embodied or disembodied, to steal that energy is another. Sexual relations, depending on how they are conducted, are instrumental in filling or depleting an individual.

That morning “quickie” that a man, or woman for that matter, may demand or beg for; He/she is fueling up. But the fact that they have to beg or demand shows that it is not a mutual desire. And that's okay! It's fine to nourish someone if you understand what you are actually giving away; comprehend the consequences that you are facing, aware of the sacrifice you are making. If you have extra potential that your spirit can afford to give up on that day and remain healthy and productive, but your partner is depleted and has an extra load to manage, then by all means do so—give up some! That is truly—beyond words... energetically— supporting your partner. This mutual consent can be negotiated energetically—beyond words. But it is essential that this is reciprocal in your relationship—that your partner does the same for you when you need an extra boost.

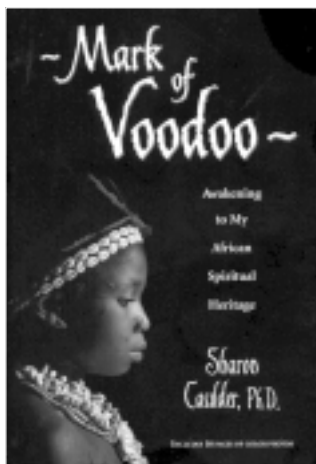

Sexual encounters with ones partner can not only fill a woman, and a man for that matter, but can simultaneously raise their levels of consciousness. This is the basis of white tantra.

TOOLS FOR EVOLVING CONSCIOUSNESS

MARK OF VOODOO: Awakening To My African Spiritual Heritage

by Sharon Caulder, Ph.D.

Mark of Voodoo is the story of Dr. Sharon Caulder's quest to Africa to reclaim her ethnic roots and her spiritual heritage. She is recognized by the Fon Vodun people as one of their own, lost to the ravishings of the slave trade centuries ago. Giving relevance to a childhood marked with initiations in preparation for Vodun sovereignty, she was proclaimed a chief and initiated as such by the supreme chief of Vodun, Daagbo Hounon Houna. Sharon and Daabo fell in love and eventually married.

Living as a chief among her people, she was deeply immersed in all aspects of Vodun. Sharon entices the reader on her journey as she experiences ancient rituals such as sacrifice, spirit possession, and even tantric sex. It becomes apparent that Vodun is a powerful religious system marked with malevolent reputation world wide, but it's benevolent aspects have historically been ignored. The Vodun people are, like most others in this world, in search of evolution.

How to Read Mark of Voodoo

Mark of Voodoo is a truly integrated, multi-dimensional, metaphysical work designed to give you a boost up the ladder of spiritual maturation. Each reading takes you another step up in consciousness.

Random reading of excerpts or chapters from the book initially is discouraged. It prevents you from taking advantage of the valuable structure inherent within it. However, re-reading excerpts that capture your interest is encouraged. Re-reading of the entire book -- after periods of contemplation and absorption of the material, and anchoring in on the new level of understanding gained from the prior reading -- are the consummate and recommended way to use the book.

Mark of Voodoo is programmed to engage you. Once it has achieved this goal it offers to you the information that is needed to compliment your present spiritual status and state of being. Most readers have reported dreaming about Africa and spending mystical time with Daagbo, the supreme chief and some of the other pertinent characters, human and divine in the story. No malice has ever been reported because that is not the true intent of the religion or of the book's author.

Mark of Voodoo is written in the traditional way of ancient metaphysical texts. It is multi-level in structure in order to accommodate people at different levels of spiritual and psychic development. The format of Mark of Voodoo is narrative in order to teach from its beginning to its end. Within each level are stories that contain the teachings to be acquired in a particular category. Psychological explanations and esoteric knowledge and wisdom are interwoven throughout the book, building on the material contained within the prior level, while preparing you for more advanced material on the higher dimensions.

MARVOO $21.95

Mark of Voodoo is mandatory reading in preparation for Dr. Caulder's workshops.

"The more civilized we get, the more westernized we get, the more our focus becomes limited to the physical world," says Caulder. "Everyone can see into the spirit world but because of our culture, we're moved away from that early in life."

The Field: The Quest for the Secret Force of the Universe

by Lynne McTaggart

Science has recently begun to prove what ancient myth and religion have always espoused: that there may be such a thing as a life force. During the past few decades, respected frontier scientists all over the globe have produced extraordinary evidence to show that an energy field-the Zero Point Field-connects everything in the universe, and we ourselves are part of this vast, dynamic network of energy exchange.

The Real Story of the Money-Control Over America

Part 3- by Sheldon Emry

EDITOR'S NOTE: The final installment focuses on the way the American money system is supposed to function and what it will take to restore it.

The Constitutional Way— Every Citizen A Stockholder

The Constitutional Way — Every Citizen A Stockholder

If we would have used the Constitutional way of “creating” the money needed in the nation, the Federal Congress would spend most of its time and study on the issuance and control of an adequate supply of stable money for the people.

If an increase of population and production required an increase in the medium of exchange, Congress would authorize the “coining,” (i.e., printing) of the determined amount. Some could be used to pay current legitimate expenses of the Federal Government, with the balance paid directly to the citizens.

Records for payment would be similar to Social Security records, except a citizen would be recorded at birth, instead of when he first goes to work. Each person on the records as of the date of the Congressional authorization would receive an equal amount just as if he were a stockholder holding one share. Just think — a payment of only $20 to each citizen would put $4 billion of debt-free and interest-free money into circulation.

Such a suggestion always scares the Bankers. Their propagandists will immediately cry, “printing press money,” and warn that it would soon be “worthless” and would “cause inflation.”

The truth is their immense usury charges on their “created” credit (our debt) is the sole cause of “inflation.” All prices on all industry, trade and labor must be raised periodically to pay the ever increasing usury charges. That is the ONLY cause of higher prices, and the money-changers spend millions in propaganda to keep you from realizing that.

The money-creators (Bankers) know that if we ever tried a Constitutional issue of debt-free, interest-free currency, even a limited issue, the benefits would be apparent immediately. That they must prevent. Abraham Lincoln was the last President to issue such debt-free and interest-free currency (in 1863) and he was assassinated shortly thereafter.

No Banker's Plunder

Under a Constitutional system no private banks would exist to rob the people. Government banks under the control of the people's representatives would issue and control all money and credit. They would issue not only actual currency, but could lend limited credit at no interest for the purchase of capital goods, such as homes.

A $60,000 loan would require only $60,000 repayment, not $255,931 as it is now. Everyone who supplied materials and labor for the home would get paid just as they do today, but the Bankers would NOT get $195,931 in usury, AND THAT IS WHY THEY RIDICULE AND DESTROY ANYONE SUGGESTING GOVERNMENT (CITIZENS') MONEY WITHOUT INTEREST AND WITHOUT DEBT.

History tells us of debt-free and interest-free money issued by governments. The American colonies did it in the 1700's and their wealth soon rivalled England and brought restrictions from Parliament, which led to the Revolutionary War.

Abraham Lincoln did it in 1863 to help finance the Civil War. He was later assassinated by an agent of the Rothschild Bank. No debt-free or interest-free money has been issued in America since then.

Several Arab nations issue interest-free loans to their citizens today. The Saracean Empire forbid interest on money for 1,000 years, and its wealth outshone even Saxon Europe. Mandarin China issued its own money, interest-free and debt-free, and historians and collectors of art today consider those centuries to be China's time of greatest wealth, culture and peace.

Germany issued debt-free and interest-free money from 1935 and on, accounting for its startling rise from the depression to a world power in 5 years. Germany financed its entire, government and war operation from 1935 to 1945 without gold and without debt, and it took the whole Capitalist and Communist world to destroy the German power over Europe and bring Europe back under the heel of the Bankers. Such history of money does not even appear in the textbooks of public (government) schools today.

Issuing money which doesn't have to be paid back in interest leaves the money available to use in the exchange of goods and services and its only continuing cost is replacement as the paper wears out. Money is the paper ticket by which such transfers are made and should always be in sufficient quantity to transfer all possible production of the nation to ultimate consumers.

It is as ridiculous for a nation to say to its citizens, “You must consume less because we are short of money,” as it would be for an Airline to say “Our planes are flying, but we can't take you because we are short of tickets.”

Why You Haven't Known

We realize this small, and necessarily incomplete, article on money may be charged with oversimplification. Some may say that if it is that simple the people would have known about it, and it could not have happened. But this MONEY-LENDERS' consPIRACY is as old as Babylon, and even in America it dates far back before the year 1913.

Actually, 1913 may be considered the year in which their previous plans came to fruition, and the way opened for complete economic conquest of our people.

The consPIRACY is old enough in America so that its agents have been, for many years, in positions such as newspaper publishers, editors, columnists, church ministers, university presidents, professors, textbook writers, labor union leaders, movie makers, radio and TV commentators, politicians from school board members to U.S. presidents, and many others.

Controlled News and Information

These agents control the information available to our people. They manipulate public opinion, elect whom they will locally and nationally, and never expose the crooked money system. They promote school bonds, municipal bonds, expensive and detrimental farm programs, “urban renewal,” foreign aid, and many other schemes which will put the people more into debt to the Bankers.

Thoughtful citizens wonder why billions are spent on one program and billions on another which may duplicate it or even nullify it, such as paying some farmers not to raise crops, while at the same time building dams or canals to irrigate more farm land.

Crazy or stupid? Neither. The goal is more debt. Thousands of government-sponsored ways to waste money go on continually. Most make no sense, but they are never exposed for what they really are, builders of “billions for the bankers and debts for the people.”

So-called “economic experts” write syndicated columns in hundreds of newspapers, craftily designed to prevent the people from learning the simple truth about our money system.

Commentators on radio and TV, preachers, educators, and politicians blame the people as wasteful, lazy, or spend-thrift, and blame the workers and consumers for the increase in debts and the inflation of prices, when they know the cause is the debt-money system itself.

Our people are literally drowned in charges and counter-charges designed to confuse them and keep them from understanding the unconstitutional and evil money-system that is so efficiently and silently robbing the farmers, the workers, and the businessmen of the fruits of their labors and of their freedoms.

When some few Patriotic people or organizations who know the truth begin to expose them or try to stop any of their mad schemes, they are ridiculed and smeared as "right-wing extremists," "super-patriots," "ultra-rightists," "bigots," "racists," even "fascists" and "anti-semites."

Any name is used which will cause them to shut up or will at least stop other people from listening to the warning they are giving. Articles and books such as you are now reading are kept out of schools, libraries, and book stores.

Some, who are especially vocal in their exposure of the treason against our people, are harassed by government agencies such as the EPA, OSHA, the IRS, and others, causing them financial loss or bankruptcy.

Using the above methods, they have been completely successful in preventing most Americans from learning the things you have read in this pamphlet. However, in spite of their control of information, they realize many citizens are learning the truth. Therefore, to prevent violence or armed resistance to their plunder of America, they plan to register all firearms and eventually to disarm all citizens. They have to eliminate most guns, except those in the hands of their government police and army.

Tell The People

The "almost hidden" conspirators in politics, religion, education, entertainment, and the news media are working for a Banker-owned United States in a Banker-owned world under a Banker-owned World Government!

Love of Country, compassion for your Race, and concern for your children should make you deeply interested in this. America's greatest problem, for our generation has not suffered under the "yoke" as the coming generations will. Usury and taxes will continue to take a larger and larger part of the annual earnings of the people and put them into the pockets of the Bankers and their political Agents. Increasing "government" regulations will prevent citizen protest and opposition to their control.

Is it possible that your grandchildren will own neither home nor car, but will live in "government-owned" apartments and ride to work in "government-owned" buses (both paying usury to the Bankers), AND BE ALLOWED TO KEEP JUST ENOUGH OF THEIR EARNINGS TO BUY A MINIMUM OF FOOD AND CLOTHING while their Rulers wallow in luxury? In Asia and eastern Europe it is called "communism;" in America it is called "Democracy" and "Capitalism."

America will not shake off her Banker-controlled dictatorship as long as the people are ignorant of the hidden controllers. International financiers, who control most of the governments of the nations, and most sources of information, seem to have us completely within their grasp.

They are afraid of only one thing: an awakened Patriotic Citizenry, armed with the truth, and with a trust in Almighty God for deliverance. This pamphlet has given you the truth about their iniquitous system. What you do with it is in your hands, as in the hands of Divine Providence. "The fear of man bringeth a snare; but whoso putteth his trust in the Lord shall be safe. (Proverbs 29: 25).

Audit The Federal Reserve System?

The Federal Reserve has never been audited by the government since it took over our money and credit in 1913. In 1975 a bill, H.R. 4316, to require an audit was introduced in Congress.

During the April, 1975 hearings, this author submitted a statement favoring the audit, as did many others. Due to pressure from the money controllers, it was not passed. No audit of the Fed has ever been made.

Why Haven't They Told You?

Why haven't they told you about this scandal — the greatest fraud in history which has caused Americans and others to spill oceans of blood, pay trillions of dollars interest on fraudulent loans and burden themselves with unnecessary taxes?

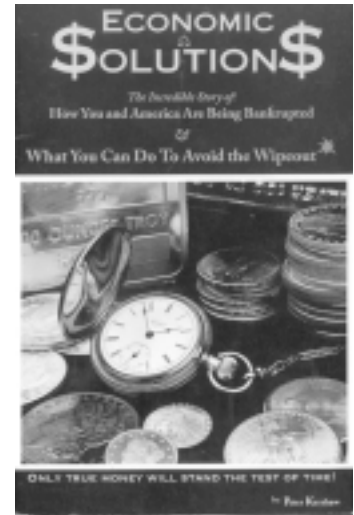

Who are "they"? "They" are all of the politicians of the two old parties and elected officials. All "educational" groups like the League of Women Voters, the Heritage Foundation and the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).

All news services, such as the Associated Press and the United Press International. All daily newspapers, including the New York "Times" and Los Angeles "Times." All weekly "news" magazines, such as "Time" and "Newsweek."

All economics and history professors at all colleges and universities. All financial newsletter publishers. All labor leaders. All televangelists, your local minister, priest or rabbi. All of the above and more are hiding the truth from you.

When the credit/debt bubble is pricked by the bankers they will foreclose on America. Then, they will own it all. There may be a "managed chaos" — riots and terrorism — to alarm the people with the fear of anarchy as the bankers prepare to impose a communistic dictatorship on America as the "solution" for the problems they, themselves, have created.

Only an educated people will be able to resist the lies of the bankers' stooges. This is why it is important for you to know the truth about how the bankers make billions for themselves and bring debts to the people.

Videographer Documents African Diaspora's History and Contribution

For the past thirty years, he has recorded and documented the personalities and landmark events that have shaped and defined the destiny of African people. He is the President of Trans Atlantic Productions, which has archived the world's largest collection of African and African-American history on videotape. More than Twenty thousand hours of raw and edited footage of film and videotape are included in this historical treasure.

Minister Brown and his associates, in 1990, produced the first African and African-American Encyclopedia on videotape. This massive work embraces hour upon hour of historical documentation of the African Diaspora, and the unique but all-too-often unheralded contributions of African American educators, scientists, inventors and other men and women of great achievement.

Minister Brown is a world traveler and a respected videographer. His abiding interest in the unsung people of the African world have taken him all over the United States, as well as the Caribbean, Panama, Cuba, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Europe, Mexico, and throughout the continent of Africa. He has traveled along with the leading Minister Clemson Brown has dedicated himself to the mission that, never again, will the achievements, contributions and history of African people be "whited-out" of world history.

African centered historians and activists of our time.

His interest in young people led to the production of over seventy-five major documentaries, which have been used as learning materials in scores of community programs, schools and colleges across the country.

Minister Brown has also trained uncounted numbers of young people in the use of media equipment and video technology. He has done this through apprenticeship programs and the establishment of media training courses in schools in the New York City area.

A man of varied talents, Minister Brown has taught art, directed community activities, athletic programs and served as youth counselor; all while winning acclaim as a painter, sculpturer and creator of jewelry.

His poetry has been collected and published and led to this inclusion in the "International Who's Who in Poetry" published by the International Biography Center of Cambridge, England.

Minister Brown was educated at the City College of New York, where he majored in Fine Arts and also specialized in African-American Studies. He earned a Bachelor of Arts Degree in 1975. Clemson Brown was ordained as a minister at the House of the Lord Church in Brooklyn, New York, and presently, serves as a board member at the Temple of the Black Messiah in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He is married to Lady Viola Brown. They are the parents of Clemson R. Brown, Jr. and Herlinda V. Brown, and the grandparents of Ashley and LaToya.

TAP's Video Archives: A Source of Cultural Information and Controversy

There is a library and video archive unlike any other in the world today. When you consider what it is and how it was created, you will know that we are truly a blessed and gifted people. This video archive is a collection of the sacred wisdom of our ancestors.

It's our history. It is a living documentation of over 30 years of Minister Brown's taping on a daily basis of what is happening to black people all over the world. It chronicles the various aspects of our existence from spiritual, to the killing of Amadou Diallo. For years Minister Brown has had a personal relationship with a huge number of African centered scholars. He has interviewed them, taped their lectures and traveled with them around the world to collect the sacred wisdom of our people.

Recently, in an interview with Minister Brown, he stated that it pains him to see his work stolen everywhere we go. "Some of our brothers think it's OK to pirate TransAtlantic Productions products - just copy and sell them. I don't think that's right - especially if you say you are a Brother or a Sister."

Others disagree, however, and believe that the information contained in the life's work of Min. Brown belongs to the people. One recently even went so far as to threaten him for attempting to copyright his own work.

We believe there are valid points on both sides of this issue, but that conflict is not the answer. In the spirit of Maat, we have worked out a deal with Min. Brown to sell certain of TAP's videos in our Ark of Sothis collection. We also removed the videos of other producers or lecturers for whom we have not received express permission or prefer not to market.

COINTELPRO*

Following videos are about informants & their role to feed info to authorities about organizations as to what the plans of the organization are and who the leaders or potential leaders are. Usually recruited by patriotism saying this group is anti-government and giving this info is harmless. When the intelligence community thinks the time is right, they drop an agent provocateur in the group. What does the provocateur do? He provokes actions that can be ruled illegal by the law so that they can move on the people who's involved. The agent sets up the conspiracy. There's always more than 1 agent in an organization.
